Silence will not protect you

Zanele Muholi. Photography

22 March to 9 June 2014

Curators: Birgit Bosold & Wolfgang Theis

The Schwules Museum in collaboration with Amnesty International present an extensive exhibition of South African artist Zanele Muholi's photographic works.

An internationally recognized photographer, filmmaker and activist, Zanele Muholi deals with the experiences of the 'black' queer and especially lesbian community in South Africa and other African countries. In a repressive social and political climate which condemns queer ways of living and in which lesbians, gay men and trans* are faced with constant discrimination and persecution, her works represent acts of self-assertion and empowerment.

Her photographs intervene, are themselves deeds, political activism and resistance. She achieves a thematization of violence which does not portray individuals as victims. On the contrary, her photographs depict people who gaze confidently into the camera, make their own decisions and have voices of their own.

The exhibition presents an exclusive selection of Muholi's body of work. Alongside an assortment of pieces chosen from amongst the artist's early work (2003–2005), the Schwules Museum exhibits images from the series Beloved (2005–2010), Being (2007) and Faces and Phases (ongoing since 2006), as well as a selection of Muholi's works on trans*persons and the video works Difficult Love (2010) and @24 (2011–2012).
